

FAASTeam presents:

CFI Best Practices

Certified Flight Instructors are not only responsible for generating safe, quality pilots, but can also create a long-term fan of aviation. Unfortunately, a lack of professionalism on the instructor's part can deter pilots from achieving their aviation goals. Join John Ladley for a frank, open-forum discussion focused on improving the overall quality and professionalism in the flight instruction industry. John will outline the "CFI Best Practices" from his work with National Association of Flight Instructors(NAFI) on the subject, and lead an honest discussion of what we do well and consider areas that need improvement, in an attempt to answer the important question: What does CFI professionalism look like? This presentation is one of several activities NAFI is using to gather up what CFI "Best practices" should be. We also need to point out "worst practices." Once these practices are defined then the plan is to develop programs to teach advanced techniques that improve CFI competency. Sample best practices will be presented and discussed, and a short survey will be reviewed as a tool to define CFI professionalism. Instructors, pilots and students are welcome and will help round out the discussion.
