

The FAA Safety Team presents:

Preparing For The Unexpected

All too often pilots will act impulsively when faced with an unexpected event, and sometimes their "startle response" will weld the final link in the chain leading to a fatal accident. During this presentation, Mike Brubaker will present scenarios to help you prepare for the unexpected. He will discuss: how to counter the "startle response"; the proper thing to do if you have an inadvertent IMC encounter; how "threat and error management" can make you a safer pilot; the proper response to engine failures at any time from takeoff to landing; how to do the right thing when the unexpected happens to you. Directions: Please see map link for directions, seminar will be in hangar.
