

In-Flight Emergencies - Part 4 - International Flying Club Monthly Safety Meeting

Event Details

You learn to fly in about 15-20% of the time you spend training for your Private Pilot certificate. The rest of the time, you train for a lot of stuff you never need... until you do ??

Join us for the final segment in the series as we take an in-depth look at many types of in-flight emergencies, how to identify them, how to manage them, and best of all, how to manage the risks and prevent them from ever happening!

Michael Baraz, CFII

Michael Baraz holds ATP, CFI, CFII, AGI, and IGI certificates. He is an active flight instructor and an FAA Safety Team Lead Representative. He loves helping people achieve their flying goals and staying safe, current, and proficient through continuous training with WINGS credits. Michael flies a Mooney Rocket 305 (because life is too short to fly slow). He is a board member of IFC and a member of most of the local flying clubs and pilot associations in the Chicago area.
