

Energy Management - April Topic of the Month

A General Aviation Joint Steering Committee study of accidents determined that a significant number of fatal accidents resulted from pilots allowing their aircraft energy state to decay sufficiently to make sustained flight impossible.

Teaching Points:

- General aviation accidents have resulted from loss of control while maneuvering and during emergency descents, approaches, and landings.
- The likelihood of maintaining positive control and executing successful forced landings can be improved through awareness of and successful management of aircraft energy state throughout all flight phases.

You are invited to a ZoomGov meeting.
When: Apr 25, 2024 06:30 PM Eastern Time (US and Canada)
