

Planning those really loooong cross country flights

Want to fly like a bird - south for the winter? Or ski in the Rockies? Dan MacDonald, a long time flight instructor and aircraft owner, presents planning and flying long distance trips. Internet applications and GPS make this process much easier than in the past, including flight planning, weather, and locating fuel stops.

This is an informal presentation that encourages participants to contribute their experiences and questions. Arrive early and stay late for coffee, donuts, and conversation with other pilots.
