Steve Thibault attended the UND, which is where he first began his flight instructing career. After graduating from UND, Steve returned to the Twin Cities and began flight instructing. Since then, Steve has made the training of pilots his profession. During his 37 years of flying and his 32 years of flight instructing, Steve has accumulated over 18,000 hours of flight time, provided more than 17,000 hours of flight instruction in airplanes and 2,000 hours of instruction in flight simulators, has given an unknown number of hours of ground instruction, and has flown over 100 different types of airplanes. Steve is the owner of FlightProficiency, a flight training company and co-owner of SimFlite Minnesota, a simulator company located at the Anoka County Airport. In 2015, the FAA named Steve the “CFI of the Year” for the Great Lakes Region.
