

Topic of the Month - Advance Air Mobility

There is a new kid on the flying block, the electric Vertical Takeoff and Landing (eVTOL) aircraft. No doubt you've heard stories of air taxis and seen videos of helicopter-sized "drones" that could carry people and cargo. Have you wondered whether this implementation can be done safely? How is this going to affect what I do flying my general aviation airplane? This seminar gives you some background on where the FAA and the larger international aviation safety community are going to meet these challenges. What have they done and what do they plan to do? What impact will this have on the equipment and the airspace you use daily?

The goal of the FAA and this presentation is to continue the safest flying safety record in history. Giving you more knowledge these 21st century flying machines brings us all one step closer to continued safer flight.
