

Orlando FSDO FAASTeam presents:

Risk Management in Flight Instructing and Multi-Pilot Environments

Flight instructing is much closer to airline employment than many pilots realize. The reason is simple – multiple pilots and differing approaches to problem solving. Even non-commercial pilots often experience situations similar to those found in the airline realm. This seminar takes a look at the types of issues that develop in a cockpit with more than one pilot. Topics include safety while instructing, coordinating with other crew members, and addressing safety issues without causing interpersonal problems. The seminar is recommended for pilots and student pilots at all levels. Questions and comments are encouraged throughout the presentation. An hour of Wings might just save you from a fist-flight in the cockpit. This event is designed to be an interactive audience experience. PLEASE bring your questions and participate in the discussion!
