

Orlando FSDO FAA Safety Team presents:

Determining Fault with Litigation

This 2-hour interactive program will address various considerations that must be made with every flight. The presentation will cover several personal experiences of the speaker that lead to court litigation. Using on scene videos from local media and TV stations, along with actual court documents, Ray will talk about the claims made, and the legal defenses used, against those claims. We will cover Aeronautical Decision Making (ADM), risk management, FARs, personality types, and equipment failures. The presentation will examine some of the hidden traps that can hinder your choices and influence your decisions to effectively transfer risks. You will be given information on how to potentially protect yourself from exposures. The program is appropriate for all levels of pilot skill and experience from Students to ATP's.

Disclaimer: This program will not replace the need for legal advice that should be sought in the event of legal actions that you may be involved in. The discussions will be based solely on laws that were in effect at the location and time at which the events took place and may not apply to any case that you may be involved with.
