

FAASTeam presents:

Pre-Flight - Use of Weather Information - In-Flight Weather Information

There are many aviation weather products out there that can be used to interpret weather and interpreting the information does not have to be mind-boggling. Whether you are a VFR or IFR pilot, you need to choose the product that you are most comfortable with and still get the required information needed for a safe flight.

Let's discuss these products, the data, and also what constitutes an official legal weather briefing....or is there such a thing?

Please download the PDF information below for your reference library.
