Dr. Steinmetz will also give a presentation on Skew T's. Skew-T/Log-P plots have a crazy name but they present a lot of useful information about the state of the atmosphere. Dr. Steinmetz will discuss how they work, how you can use them to determine icing levels and the likelihood of being in icing conditions, and how you can obtain predictions along your line of flight.

Bring your EFB, your experience, and your questions, and be ready to participate.

All are welcome. You do not need to be an EAA member or instrument rated pilot to attend

We will also be discussing how you can earn WINGS Credit.
