When's the last time you practiced your emergency procedures? Do you have a flow? Where is the best place to land. Are you prepared to spend the night waiting for rescue? What if you are injured? How are you going to signal search and rescue?

Fernando Molina and a fellow pilot were returning from a airplane camp-out when they experience engine failure resulting in an emergency landing in the remote Utah wilderness and faced with those very questions.

Join Mikes special guest for this 1 hour presentation as he gives a 1st hand account from emergency to rescue, and his thoughts about what went right, and what could of been better
