

FAASTeam presents:

Single Pilot / Crew Resource Management

The air carrier industry has embraced Crew Resource Management (CRM) as a necessary initiative that has helped mitigate aircraft accidents caused by human error. Even though traditional CRM focused on multi-crewed environments, several elements (such as communications, teamwork, decision-making, and situational awareness) can be applied to single-pilot operations. The Private Pilot PTS defines Single pilot CRM as, "the art and science of managing all the resources (both onboard the aircraft and outside sources) available to a single-pilot (prior to and during flight)". That over-generalization is further defined with respect to six CRM Components:•Aeronautical Decision Making (ADM)•Risk Management•Task Management•Situational Awareness (SA)•Controlled Flight into Terrain Awareness (CFIT-A)•Automation ManagementCome and tap the knowledge of this highly experienced flight instructor as he takes you through the importance of CRM to Private Pilot and adds lesson learned from his time flying for a regional air carrier.
