

FAASTeam presents:

Planning the FOG Multi-Day Southwest Trip

Southern California and the Southwest are popular destinations due to the appeal of the scenery along the way as well as the attractions and dining once you reach the destination. A number of pilot bucket list destinations can be found in this part of the country including Catalina, San Diego, Sedona, Monument Valley, Grand Canyon, Las Vegas among others. Every summer, the San Carlos Flight Center plans a multi-day journey to seek out new destinations, spectacular scenery and challenging airports that represent unique aeronautical challenges such as navigating in complex airspace and operating at high elevation airports.

Join SCFC Chief Pilot Herb Patten as he discusses details of this flight training experience trip. All long cross-country trips involve lots of thorough and thoughtful planning; so in this seminar, Herb will preview planning and selecting routes, airport destination considerations, airplane performance at the higher elevation airports, and insight into how to operate safely based on insight from previous experience in this region.

Whether you are considering joining this training adventure to the Southwest or are just curious
