

FAASTeam presents:

Personal Minimums

You don't have to be involved in aviation very long before you hear the time-honored advice on personal minimums. It goes something like this: "Legal weather minimums are just a starting point. You should establish your own personal minimums for flying, and you must have the discipline to stick to them -- no matter how much you want to make the trip." Sound familiar? It's good advice. Most pilots would agree that it's a good idea, and it's probably true that more accident pilots -- not to mention their innocent passengers -- might be alive today if they had followed it. So why didn't they? And why do so many pilots who appear for flight reviews or other training look sheepish and make excuses for why they haven't managed to write down their own personal minimums?

Garry will provide a presentation that will both demonstrate the need and provide a take-a-way solution for establishing your own personal minimums. He will cover the "PAVE" process, including a "get started" checklist for all attendees. This presentation is relevant for student pilots through seasoned ATP's.
